

Peregrine Onboarding/Inbound Assessment FAQs

Why do I need to take the Inbound Assessment?

Every University of Redlands program has a set of learning outcomes that define the program in terms of what the faculty expect you to accomplish in your degree program. In the School of Business & Society, every program that uses the Inbound Assessment has a learning outcome related to your knowledge of business and management:

- BSB Program Learning Outcome 1: Demonstrate knowledge of core business disciplines to effectively address organizational challenges and opportunities.
- MBA Program Learning Outcome 1: Use and apply business knowledge from disciplines such as accounting, finance, marketing, management, information systems, operations, and global business to generate/create business solutions.
- MSOL Program Learning Outcome 2: Utilize principles, theories, and methods of leadership and management to address issues related to organizational effectiveness.

The purpose of the assessment is to help you discover your strengths and weaknesses.

What topics does the Inbound Assessment cover?

The specific topics covered depend on your academic program. Each assessment covers core knowledge areas and optional areas of knowledge selected by the faculty for your particular program based on the learning outcomes and curriculum for that program. It is important to take both the inbound assessment at the beginning of your program and the outbound assessment at the end because it is the difference between the two scores that tells you what you have accomplished (and where you may still need further improvement).

I just took the Peregrine Outbound Assessment for my undergraduate program. Do I have to take the assessment again?

Because the faculty have chosen different knowledge areas for each program, the outbound assessment for your undergraduate program cannot be used as an inbound assessment for your graduate program. Only inbound and outbound results from the same program can be compared reliably to give you insight into your learning in the program.

When do I need to take the Inbound Assessment?

You must complete this assessment two weeks before the end of your first semester in the program. Otherwise, you will not be able to register for courses for the next semester during open registration. Note: MSOL students must complete this assessment while enrolled in the MGMT633 course.

How long will the Inbound Assessment take?

---

The Peregrine assessment will last approximately 60 to 90 minutes. We encourage you to set aside time to complete the assessment in one sitting. If you wish to break up that time, you are permitted two breaks of up to 15 minutes each; after 15 minutes, you will be logged out of the assessment. You may start the assessment up to three times (i.e., stop and start twice after you first begin the assessment). You must complete the assessment within 48 hours of beginning it.
